The Program of Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies at UCR
The Islamophobia Series on Islam in Europe and Muslim-Christian Encounters present:

Brian Aivars Catlos, Professor of Religious Studies (University of Colorado, Boulder)

Infidels or Brothers? Integration and Marginalization of European Muslims in the Pre-Modern Era

Commentary by: Randolph Head (History), John Ganim (English) & Fariba Zarinebaf (MEIS & History)

Brian A. Catlos is an award winning historian of medieval Spain and the Islamic and Christian Mediterranean, and author of several books, including, Infidel Kings and Unholy Warriors: Faith, Power and Violence in an Age of Crusade and Jihad (Farrar, Straus & Giroux), The Victors and the Vanquished, Christians and Muslims in Catalonia and Aragon, 1050-1300 (Cambridge, 2004), which is the winner of Premio del Rey (AHA) and John E. Fagg Prize (AHA). His recent book, Muslims of Medieval Latin Christendom, ca. 1050-1614 (Cambridge University Press) won the prestigious Albert Hourani Book Prize in Middle Eastern Studies in 2014. He is the co-director of the UC multi-campus Mediterranean Research Project (MRP) and a Research Associate of Humanities at UC-Santa Cruz.

Time & place: Wednesday, January 27, 2016, INTS, 1113, 3:00-5:00 pm.
Cosponsored by departments of History, Peace & Conflict Studies, Theatre, Film & Digital Production, English, and Hispanic Studies. Open to Public.
For more information, please contact MEIS Chair, Fariba Zarinebaf at faribaz @ucr.edu.